Mr. Jurin revealed that the food and beverage industry is an important industry for the Thai economy. Thailand is reportedly the 13th largest food exporter in the world, with the market share of more than 2.3%, and the 4th largest exporter in Asia. Although the international trade is restricted due to the COVID-19 outbreak, the export of Thailand food products in the first quarter of 2022 could reach the amount of 286 billion baht, an increase of 28.8% compared to the first quarter of 2021. Such numbers can be achieved not because of "luck", but as a result of strong collaboration between the public and private sectors in the form of the Joint Public and Private Sector Consultative Committee on Commerce, which is an important mechanism in solving trade problems, especially the international trade. Another outcome from the aforementioned mechanism is to build confidence in food and agricultural products consumption from Thailand that it is safe and free from coronavirus. To create safety standards and enable buyers to trace the origin of the products, Mr. Jurin initiated collaboration between 4 Ministries in issuing COVID-19 Prevention Best Practice certificates to 262 factories, aiming to raise confidence and encourage Thailand to become the hub of the world's agricultural product and food producers. In addition, the Ministry of Commerce is constantly holding activities to promote international trade in order to meet the requirements of global buyers. At present, many countries have begun to open the country to foreign tourists. As for Thailand, there is the event organized to achieve the goal "Thai Food" to "The World's Food". The event "Thaifex-Anuga Asia 2022 - The Hybrid Edition" with the theme "Re-imagine the Future of Food and Beverage Industry," is organized to meet the requirements of many buyers who wish to buy products from local sellers in Thailand. The data from the Department of International Trade Promotion indicates that the Thaifex-Anuga Asia 2022 "The Hybrid Edition" is a combination between the event in the exhibition center (offline) and the virtual food exhibition (online).
